The current pandemic has deeply impacted nonprofit organizations in multiple ways. Nonprofit organizations have had to pivot quickly and rethink the types of services they provide, the manner in which services are delivered, their client base, and their expected donor base and other funding sources. All nonprofit organizations face great uncertainty about future operations; some are uncertain about their ability to survive. Particularly hard hit are those nonprofits which were struggling pre-COVID.

This program focuses on the steps that nonprofit organizations are taking to strengthen their operations by combining resources, and the steps that they must take when their continued operation is no longer possible.

Panelists:

- Emily Kretchmer, Krokidas & Bluestein LLP
- Eric Curtis, Curtis Strategy
- Elizabeth S. Reinhardt, Law Offices of Elizabeth Reinhardt
- John T. Morrier, Casner & Edwards, LLP
