

Krokidas & Bluestein Partner Emily Kretchmer to Co-Lead Discussion for the Boston Bar Association: “From Bills to Laws: An Update on Massachusetts Healthcare Legislation”

Krokidas & Bluestein is pleased to share that Emily Kretchmer, a partner in the firm’s healthcare practice, will co-lead a discussion for the Boston Bar Association Health Law Section on October 29 entitled “From Bills to Laws: An Update on Massachusetts Healthcare Legislation.” Emily and Mark Phillips, Staff Director for Representative Stanley and Chair of the Joint Committee on Elder Affairs, will be covering the omnibus long-term bill, Chapter 197 of the Acts of 2024, “An Act to Improve Quality and Oversight of Long-Term Care,” that was passed in September. The bill includes sweeping changes impacting nursing homes and assisted living residences.

Krokidas & Bluestein is home to one of the area’s premier health law groups; the firm has played a central role in strengthening the base of providers in the region who are working vigorously to further their missions. We forge long-term relationships with our clients, advising them from start up through growth and repositioning, business combinations and transfers, and restructurings and dispositions. Our extensive industry knowledge helps give our healthcare and human service provider clients an edge in regulatory matters, complex transactions, and enforcement actions. The firm also provides comprehensive representation on corporate and governance, litigation, nonprofit tax, finance, real estate, and employment matters. K&B attorneys in those areas are experienced in working with health and human service providers.
